In my opinion changing of the place of living and the place of working allows people to try new experiences and even change their life positions. Changing, <sup>e</sup>tasting, trying of <sup>Something</sup> new gives people lots of opportunities, makes them study and develop yourself. New places mean new meetings and friends<sup>98</sup>. But of course new experiences make new problems. You ~~will~~ <sup>have to</sup> create all social contacts again, break new "walls", find your new places ~~where~~ where you want to be. However, new problems and mistakes make you stronger and improve the range of skills like creativity, speed of thinking, mind sharpness etc.<sup>98</sup>

My example is when my parents decided to buy a flat and live there. I had to change the school and it was a big stress for me. So ~~many~~ many new people. I spent four years to find new real friends and adapt to new everything. But here I found all my hobbies. I started to explore all parts of our city, finding new good places to walk and spend time. I've got lots of new knowledge<sup>s</sup> and impressions.<sup>173</sup> And it all became <sup>a</sup> really good experience for me.<sup>183</sup>

Nature of people makes them find new spaces and opportunities. And every time people find something unknown for them. Humans are always scared of everything new, so maybe that's why we are trying to know as much as we can about <sup>it</sup> ~~them~~. And <sup>with</sup> by that knowledge<sup>s</sup> humanity develops itself. That's why ~~I~~ I think that chang<sup>es</sup>ings are good and important for us.<sup>244</sup>
